

Collaborative inquiry: a methodological exploration

A TAOS workshop in collaboration with the Vrije Universiteit Brussel

From a social constructionist perspective, research can be seen as a form of social practice that produces a particular kind of knowledge. An important idea thereby is that knowledge - also academic knowledge – is always co-constructed in & through relationships.. This approach on research has important implications on the way a research is designed.

These two days workshop focuses on social constructionist inquiry and invites the participants to explore and reflect upon their own research design and more specifically their own methodological choices. Departing from some ideas about what SC research can be, we will create an active, co-learning space where each participant can explore his/her own research in collaboration with the group of participants.

When: 29th & 30th September 2016.

Where: VUB, Campus Etterbeek, Pleinlaan 2, 1050 Brussels, Belgium.

Registration: For information please email Celiane Camargo Borges at celianeborges@gmail.com

Facilitators:

Celiane Camargo-Borges, Ph.D. is a researcher and practitioner working at the interface of psychology, healthcare, community building and organization development. Currently she is faculty at NHTV Breda University of Applied Sciences and at the TAOS Institute.

Jasmina Sermijn, Ph.D. works as a postdoc & part-time lecturer at the Faculty of Psychology and Educational Sciences of the Vrije Universiteit Brussel, as a systemic therapist in Hestia, and as a trainer in Rapunzel & Eutopia.

